

Neck's Grille

It's a long-standing tradition at the Technical Center for Thursday to be designated as "student snack day". And it's a very popular day indeed! On Thursdays, the Culinary Arts students turn their kitchen/classroom into Neck's Grille and show off their cooking skills. Breakfasts and lunches are made to order and delivered to students and faculty around the school. According to instructor David Blair, this busy day usually brings in $150.00-$200.00 which helps purchase teaching materials. What's the most popular offering? Mr. Blair says that it changes from week-to-week but that steak & cheese subs and cheeseburgers (with fries, of course) are always crowd favorites. Throughout the year, Culinary Arts I & II students learn cooking basics though gourmet preparations and everything in between. But on Thursdays, we're glad they're Neck's Grille!
